State War Convention Friday.

The conference to be held at the City hall, Montpelier, Friday, is designed to give an opportunity to active war workers to meet, exchange views and coordinate plans.

This meeting will be held under the auspices of the National Speaking bureau of the Committee on Public Information, assisted by the Council of National Defense through the State Councils Section, although the Vermont Committee of Public Safety will be sponsor for the expense and largely for the practical details of the meeting. It is especially desired that the Vermont Committee of Public Safety should be represented from every town and city. All Federal war agencies operating in Vermont are requested to have their representatives present at the War conference. The energies of all war organizations, state and national, should be centered for the time being in this effort.

The meeting will be held in the City hall in the afternoon followed by a meeting in the evening. The following speakers will address the conference:

Major Rutledge Smith of Nashville, Tennessee, who is an energetic and able speaker, and has done most excellent work in the organization and cooperation of the work in different states.

Arthur E. Bestor, who is president of the Chautauqua Institution of Chautauqua, New York. Frederick G. Wolcott of the Food Administration. Mr. Wolcott's experience in Belgium and Poland while serving with the commission in the attempt to relieve the suffering in this country during the German invasion, stirred his indignation against the inhuman policies of starvation, slavery and murder which the German government not only practiced but officially avowed.

The Rev. Laughlin MacLean Watt, a "Highlander" who has recently returned from the front after three or four months' service, and after a leave of absence, he was transferred to the "Black Watch."
